Among the Farmers

Country Nights. "Now I lay me down to sleep."
I hear the neighboring froggles peep.
They sing in melancholy tones,
And drive my neighbors from their homes.

But it takes little time to learn What city life is like. Of all the noise and traffic Throughout the sleepless night! Now I've turned back to that countrylfarm,
Which seemed so dull to keep,
And now I sleep throughout the night,
Although the froggles peep!
—Bernard Fabrizi, Jr.

(By President E. D. Page.) I think it will be generally conceded that the year 1923 was a good year for the dairy end of the livestock breeding business, and that I believe must always be the foundation upon which success in dairy stock breeding must stand, while sale of surplus stock must, at least to most breeders, be of secondary importance.

While during the past year dairy products have hardly paid cost of production if the cost of production is figured as it is on all other lines of business, mercan-tile and industrial, yet I believe they have come nearer to paying cost of pro-duction than any other considerable branch of agricultural effort. One proof of an adequate return is the fact that the amount of milk is rapidly increasing. Farmers are seeing that dairying is their one best bet, that while no one can live in luxury on the profits from Ten minutes before the funeral of his 14-year-old granddaughter, Ethel Fleury, left his home in North Adams, Mass., Frank A. Fletcher, 58 years old, died suddenly. Grief is believed to have hastened his death. His granddaughter had been a great favorite with him.

The Boston City Council, adopting a resolution of President Donoghue, called on the school committee to consider the advisability of establishing a municipal university. The scope of the proposed institution would be to "teach the arts, sciences, medicine, law, etc."

Chief Nicholas is grandfather of Joe Nicholas, Indian musician, who, with his beand, has many engagements through the United States, as well as in the provinces.

Although he hung "frozen" to a 2300-volt live wire for five minutes before the current could be shut off, and then fell 10 feet when the circuit was cut, George Goutier, 20-year-old lineman on the Groveland division of the Haverhill Electric Company, is expected to recover from his shock.

While Marshall Frederick Gutherz, Worcester, Mass., electrical engineer, is seeking in probate court to have his named changed to Goodheart, for purposes of simplification, John Ethemeo Delos, Leominster, fruit peddler, asks the court to change his name to John Demetreos Despotopulos, which he sets forth was his family name.

Co-operative. Denmark. (By Alfred Miller.)

To give American readers an idea (the extent of the co-operative power in Denmark, it is necessary first to look over the geography and study the climatic conditions of the country. While it largely is a country of small farms of 10 to 15 acres, with fields like garden patches, all farms are not small. There are a large number of farms with 50 to 100 acres, and some with 400 to 600 acres.

Shopping Lists. There are probably not many house-wives, nowadays, who fail to avail themshelves of the shopping list, that saver of time, money, and good temper.

The shopping list prevents gaps in the busy hours, by seeing to it that all necessities for a task are on hand before it is begun. Without it one may find, when her cake is partly mixed, that the baking good memory, is to have a place to write down the things needed, not when they run out, but a little before, and to consult the list on every occasion when shop ping is to be done. It takes three shopping lists to help me keep house. This is because I have not all the money I need to spend, and therefore cannot buy anything and everything which suits my fancy.

My lists are labelled "Must Haves,"
"Need, but can do without," and lastly "Like to Haves."

The housewife who must keep house on a limited income will know almost exactly what the separate lists contain The "Must Haves" include all househol necessities, not only in the food line, bu such things as towels, brooms, pillow- m cases, children's shoes and garments, as well as the same things for the grownups. Sometimes even the "Must Have" list carries a thing for quite a while be fore it is convenient to purchase it, and cross it off. But the "Must Haves" are permanent institutions. Hardly ever is one of them removed from the list until it has been bought and put in use.

The "Needs" are different. They include such things as new rugs, books, magazines, things in the house which are beginning to get shabby, but which, if money is scarce, can be made to do a show little while longer. The curtains may show little rents, but they go down on the "Needs" list, and are carefully mended till an unexpected check comes.

Sometimes it is necessary to change a "Need" to a "Must Have." It is not often that a "Need". often that a "Need" goes on the "Like to Haves," though sometimes a "Like to Have" is transferred to the "Needs." This happened when the new rugs were purchased, and a vacuum cleaner, long a "Like to Have," went on the "Need" ist, because the rugs could not be cared for properly without it.

The "Like to Haves" are the things it gives me the most satisfaction to acquire.

A radio set occupied a place on that list a long time—and lo, it is here. The list contains such items as a trip to Europe, and one to the far East, a car, a sealskin coat, a new house and a new plano. Some of these may move up to the "Needs." A new house would be a "Need," if the old one is sold. A car might become a business necessity. And ohl the delight and satisfaction of cross ing an item off the "Like to Have" list not because it is impossible to get it, but because it is a dream come true. I remember an old woman who said she had had only three things to wish for. Two of them she had acquired by patient waiting. The third she told to some

So you see, it is not folly to keep a "Like to Have" list. It may not be useful in the ways the "Must Have" and Need" lists are, but it is, at least, something to dream over and look for-

A Good Fall Investment. One of the best fall investments for the housewife is a barrel of apples. It returns 100 per cent for every dollar in-

Although there are but three of us in my family, I purchase a barrel of apples regularly every year, choosing those apples that keep well. Purchasing apples in this way means a definite saving in money. Every fall, my husband and I take the flivver and make the rounds of the farmhouses, inquiring prices of apples. When we find the kind of apples we want, at a reasonable price, we place an order, and the barrel usually arrives some time in November. We save several dollars by this method.

And, oh, what a comfort those apples are! When my allowance doesn't stretch from one Saturday to another, I find there are many tasty, costless desserts and salads that can be made from those apples. When Junior goes to school, an apple sandwich in his lunch-box insures an appetizing, wholesome lunch. And winter evenings, when our little family gathers before the open-grate fire, a crisp, red apple tastes so good.

Besides getting all the good from the apple itself, I utilize the cores and skins for making apple itself. or making apple jelly. Not one bit of Last, but not least, apples are such a good laxative tonic that I find I need purchase but little medicine with my barrel of red treasures in the cellar. "An apple a day keeps the doctor away"-it's an old adage, but it's true.

A Bunch of Celery. Do you realize the possibilities to be ound in a bunch of celery?
Select a large bunch and be sure that it is not green. Pick the stalks apart, wash all thoroughly. Put the heart and more tender pieces on ice and save for a dinner relish.

The larger, tougher stalks may then be cut up into fine pieces and put into a small saucepan with salt and cooked until tender. Then make a cream sauce using water in which celery was boiled as well as milk. Cook a few minutes in the sauce, and serve on thin slices of toast, sprinkled with a bit of grated cheese and paprika. This makes an at-There still remain the end and leaves, Cut these into small pieces with the sois-sors and cover with cold water, to which has been added a small onion, cut up, a quarter of a teaspoonful of salt, and a bit of thyme or bay leaf. Cook slowly until tender, add milk and thicken with a little flour and butter. This makes a delicious and nourishing soup for dinner. A clever housewife taught me this trick, and if she did not care to make a soup the ends were carefully dried and wrapped in a paper and put away ready to use in a vegetable soup. My Mammy's Meringue. Until my old negro cook taught me the secret of making meringue, it had always acted like a capricious child—good when I was alone with it, but bad when company came. Add one teaspoonful of vanilla flavoring, and beat in well. Next comes the important part—the baking. Put the meringue on the pudding, or whatever it is being used on, and put it on the top rack of the oven. Leave the door open, and every few seconds turn the baking dish around. Continue to do this until the meringue is a delicate brown. Then remove from the oven, and put it where no cool air can blow on it for five min- ture, and they examine the suspected ntes.
